'We have been incredibly impressed with the quality of service provided and the compassion shown by your staff'

The medical profession are a group of caring and highly trained people. Unfortunately, mistakes and errors can occur and, when they do, the Clinical Negligence department at Drummond Miller is here to help and advise you.

As a firm we have substantial experience in this area and can ensure access to fully qualified expert witnesses within the medical profession to allow independent assessment of potential claims. We also have considerable experience in liaising with solicitors instructed on behalf of the Medical Defence Unions and Health Trusts and in successfully negotiating such claims without recourse to litigation where appropriate.

The firm has been and is currently involved in a wide range of cases from multi-million pound birth damage claims to claims in respect of negligence alleged against a GP or dentist, or within a hospital setting e.g. gynaecology, surgery, accident & emergency departments.

Clinical Negligence Litigation is complex and time consuming and raises its own difficulties in relation to funding. However, the firm has considerable experience of funding such litigations both through initial investigation and court proceedings. The firm will work on the basis of advice and assistance, Legal Aid, insurance and private funding and also consider accepting work on a speculative, ie no win, no fee, basis where appropriate.

Liesa Spiller is accredited by the Law Society of Scotland in Clinical Negligence Law and deals exclusively with pursuer claims. She is head of the Clinical Negligence team from the firm's Edinburgh office in Moray Place but, as the firm has branches across Central Scotland, she is happy to travel to discuss cases with clients or correspondent firms.
